Practice Summary

Andrew Middleman has been practicing law since 2016. For the first five years of Andrew's legal career, he practiced criminal defense almost exclusively, beginning with appeals and oral arguments in the Court of Special Appeals of and the Court of Appeals of Maryland (now Appellate Court and Supreme Court of Maryland, respectively), before learning to try misdemeanor and felony cases in Maryland's District and Circuit Courts. Andrew, a native of Baltimore, Maryland, has represented clients in motor vehicle and bus accidents, personal injury, and premises liability cases, and is an experienced litigator before the Maryland Workers' Compensation Commission. He has authored multiple academic articles published in legal journals.
